Could You Be Living Better— with a Serious Illness?

It's hard to imagine all the struggles and worries people face when they are living with a serious illness—unless it's happening to you or someone you love. Fortunately, there are services that can help. You just need to know where to look.

Agrace Supportive Care provides in-home palliative (PAL-lee-uh-tiv) care. It's specialized, whole-person medical consultations for people with a serious illness. The goal is to prevent or relieve suffering and help people find the best possible quality of life, despite being ill.

How it works: A Supportive Care consultation is a detailed, in-home visits made by a nurse practitioner (NP), who concentrates on finding better ways to manage symptoms and optimize medications—working with the patient's current medical team. They teach about what to expect as the disease progresses and help the patient and family prepare for what may happen in the future.

Could you or someone you love benefit from this service? Supportive Care may benefit people who:

- are struggling with symptoms from serious illnesses such as cancer; diseases of the heart, liver, kidneys or lungs; MS, Parkinson's disease, ALS, stroke and dementia);
- have trouble leaving the home due to their symptoms;
- have had repeat hospitalizations or emergency room visits due to unmanaged symptoms; or
- would benefit from discussing goals of care and what's important to them.

Medicare, Medicaid and most insurers usually cover Supportive Care consultations and follow-up visits. You may have a co-payment. If you do not have insurance and cannot pay for the consultation, Agrace may be able to offer you help paying, through its Care for All program.

If you want to ask questions or learn more, call Agrace's Oconomowoc-based Supportive Care Team at (262) 468-4409 or visit Agrace.org/SupportiveCare.
